FINAL TRIUMPH SCORED BY BIG BOOTLEG KING

Court of Appeals Orders His Release on Charge of Insanity.

(Bulletin)

LIMA, O., March 30.—An attempt will be made to reserve the court's decision ordering the release of George Remus, bootlegger and slayer of his wife, it was announced this afternoon by the Allen county prosecuting attorney's office.

Under any circumstances, Remus will not be freed from the asylum for two days, because of the state law not permitting this.

LIMA, O., March 30.—(INS)—George Remus, erstwhile "king of the bootleggers," who killed his wife and then convinced a jury that he was not guilty because of insanity, scored his final triumph today when the court of appeals ordered his release from the state asylum where he was confined as a result of the murder trial verdict.

Slew His Wife
Remus killed his wife, Imogene in Cincinnati, because, he said, she had been carrying on an affair with Franklin Dodge, former federal prohibition agent. Himself an attorney, Remus pleaded his own case before a Cincinnati jury which declared him "not guilty on the sole grounds of insanity."

Review of Case
Following a sanity hearing he was ordered committed to the state hospital at Lima. An application for a writ of habeas corpus was then entered in the third district court here based on the contention that the papers, committing Remus to the state institution had not been properly signed.

After a hearing several weeks ago the court withheld a final decision in the case pending further observation by Dr. W. H. Vorbau, superintendent of the hospital, and other physicians. Presumably these observers have now pronounced Remus responsible, and, safe to be at large, and on these findings the court ordered him released.

Seven Columbus Women Shop In Circleville Store

As proof of the fact that Columbus people come to Circleville as well as Circleville people going to Columbus, seven Columbus women shopped in Friedman's store here Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Milton Friedman secured their names as "proof of the pudding." Mrs. Edward Glaze, Mrs. Edward Rowe, Miss Helen Kaufman, Miss Laura Heiser, Mrs. Gertrude Richards, Miss Ethel Mann, Mrs. Lilly Davis.

A number of similar incidents have been reported of Columbus people shopping here. Rothman's, Criss's, Stevenson's and several other stores have reported similar incidents of having shoppers from this city.

So all the Circleville trade doesn't go to Columbus and it only goes to prove that merchants here have just as good bargains and just as nice stores to shop in as Columbus offers.

Moral: Out-of-town people appreciate Circleville: why don't you?

INFANT SON IS TAKEN BY DEATH

Pearl Ralph Jr., infant son of Pearl and Viola Cottrell Rapp of Washington township, died Friday.

Here's An Ideal Landlord For He Loves All Babies

TOLEDO, O., March 30.—(INS) Baby buggies for babies. That's the big plank in the big platform of Landlord Abraham Eiser, manager of Northgate Manor an apartment that never has a "vacancy" sign on it. The thirty-six families now paying rent to Landlord Eiser have an aggregate of 21 children.

For each child born in the apartment, Eiser writes a $25 check and presents it to the parents. Knowing the trouble mothers have in pushing a baby carriage up and down apartment stairs, Eiser has supplied a community baby buggy that is left in the hall of the first floor.

"If one buggy isn't enough, we'll get two or as many as needed," Eiser promised.

The 21 children belong to seven families, and the other fourteen couples in the apartment don't mind, as Eiser has fitted up a community playroom on an upper floor where children play in the sunshine. A drinking fountain, toys and games are part of the equipment.

Eiser is going to be the host at an Easter party in his apartment. "We have four children at our house," he explained, "and don't believe that parents should be discriminated against, just because they brought children into the world."

They have been tire dealers in London, Ohio, for the past nine years and at the request of the factory representative, for General Cords, have opened a branch in Circleville.

Mr. Orville Bumgarner will be in charge of their Circleville branch. He was formerly representative of the Hoover Vacuum Cleaner and has been a life-long representative of Circleville.

Famous Seafood Town Razed By Fire; One Dead

POCOMOKE CITY, MD., March 30.—(UP)—Crisfield, Md., famous seafood town 27 miles from here, was partly destroyed by fire last night.

Early this morning flames that had swept through four or five blocks of the business district were still out of control, though firemen from Crisfield and nearby towns had fought them since 7:30 o'clock.

Flames starting at 7:30 o'clock last evening were not put under control until 2 a. m. today by firemen from Crisfield and nearby Maryland and Delaware towns. At dawn the chief telephone operator at Crisfield said two-thirds of the town's business district had burned, including two theatres, all large stores, wholesale establishments, and oyster packing houses.

At that hour she was unable to connect with a single telephone in Crisfield. She said she had heard that from one to three persons were injured, with possibly one person dead. The fire was still smoldering, she said.

At the weekly meeting of the Rotary Club, Thursday noon in the Boggs Hotel, twenty members of the Hi-Y club of the local high school were entertained.

The local club was organized last year and now has 21 members. The club promotes better leadership and helps to hold the boys to Christian religion and builds Christian character. It is conducted entirely on a Christian citizenship program and at this time of the year it is their duty to urge better pre-Easter church attendance.

NEW UTILITIES BUILDING HAS FINE OPENING

New Quarters of Light and Power Company Filled On Opening Day.

Circleville yesterday stamped its "O. K." upon the new quarters of the Ohio Utilities Company at 114 East Main street.

Throughout Thursday afternoon and evening the formal opening took upon itself the nature of a community party, at which old friends renewed associations while enjoying the newest addition to the commercial improvement of the city.

The main office resembled a florist's display room. It was a bower of bloom, magnificent floral gifts from friends and well-wishers in and out of the city.

Every lady visitor received a rose, and the gentlemen were given cigars as the company's symbol of appreciation.

Music was provided by a large Victrola which, with latest records, was sent down from Columbus by Heaton's Music Store, and a Radiola with loud speaker contributed by M. E. Noggle, of Circleville.

Fancy cookies, made by Miss Agnes M. Burke, famous Westinghouse home economist, and baked by her on an electric range, were particularly relished by the women and kiddies.

Perhaps no other recent event in Circleville attracted so many visitors from out of the city. There were present representatives of the Westinghouse, General Electric, Erzer-Hopkins, Hughes-Peters, Sackett, Larkin and Graybar Electric Companies. Also, Division Managers of the Ohio Utilities Company from Delaware, Chillicothe, Gallipolis and Hillsboro. Officials from the central office of the Ohio Utilities Company, in Columbus, who came down for the opening were John B. Poston, General Manager; J. C. Martin, Vice President, and Lloyd Stout, Auditor.

Visitors poured into the office at the rate of more than one hundred an hour from the moment of opening at one o'clock, and by the closing hour, a total of more than fifteen hundred had given the new quarters their enthusiastic approval.

Manager, Charles T. Gilmore passed a busy day. At noon the Rotary Club interrupted its dinner to give him a noisy welcome and boisterous congratulations. Immediately upon return to his office he converted himself into a reception committee. And what a job it was! How they poured in! But "Gill" came through. "It's fine to have friends," he said as he looked the office and called it a day. "Such people deserve the best service we can give them," he added, "and, by kilowatt, they're going to get it."

The office appointments are complete in every detail, every convenience that the public could command was installed, everything was ready for the crowd that entered the portals of the company's local office. The manager, Charles T. Gilmore, and the employees of the company, the janitor up were at their posts to help entertain, and all to be congratulated on the success of the auspicious opening.

Many flowers, sent by those who presented the compliments and congratulations with flowers were, The Third National Bank, H. E. B. Co., Son, The Sackett Electric Company, Geo. H. Rodgers, Hughes-Peters Electrical Company, Guy Morgan, The Electric Co., the Ohio Utilities Company of Delaware, The Gray Bar Company, O. S. Howard, M. E. Noggle, The Erzer-Hopkins Company, William Barry, The General Electric Company, The Electric Lamp Works Company, I. H. M. Co., and A. W. Janovsky.

The condition of Mrs. L. E. Colten remains the same. She is in a state of comatose and is not expected to live. Her sister, Mrs. Vine Colten, who was confined to her home in Circleville by illness, is recovering rapidly.

Each day the Herald and Union-Herald's great salesmanship campaign has been an opportunity and each issue adds many thousands of votes to the standing of the five candidates who realize the opportunity offered them and are not slow to take advantage of the special vote offer given and the grand total of ballots bids fair to reach an immense figure when the final count is made on April 14.

The vote offer changed yesterday and every candidate will try his level best on the new proposition. They will work harder than ever to make a good showing and thereby show their friends and supporters their appreciation of the many loyal expressions shown. All candidates realize the time is getting short, the campaign is about over and right now not a single candidate can feel even reasonably sure of a prize. The vote offer is good this week and consequently the time to make your reserve vote is the next five days.

It is those candidates who do not let a single day go by without increasing their votes in the paper who are making advances toward the final victory. Keeping eternally at it will bring success and regular earnest steady workers are those who will secure the prizes. These last few days of the campaign are when the candidates will be compelled to do their best work. Every candidate in the struggle realizes that the prizes are not won by anybody, but that they will have a splendid chance to capture a grand prize, by digging in just a little harder. The candidate who now feels that he has won the grand prize will certainly receive a bump on the evening when the final count is made and the prizes awarded. He must not settle down to any "easy slide" for it's the writer's candid opinion that the automobile or any one of the other prizes will be won and lost during the short time between now and the close. Now is the time to keep right after subscriptions and not let a thing interfere with the work of subscription getting. Try to get at least four subscriptions each day, then on Thursday when the extra votes are given you will have a substantial report to turn in, and will of course be given big bonus ballots as a reward for your activity.

The campaign has two more weeks to run. During this time hundreds of subscriptions will be collected and it is now time for all candidates to collect in those promised subscriptions, and not let it go to the last week, for during the last few days of the campaign you will be busier than ever grabbing off unlooked for and unexpected subscriptions, and you will not have time to cover your territory and get your prizes, therefore you should collect them this week. Canvass your town, your city, your neighborhood and get everyone interested. Don't let a single person go by without having been given an opportunity for subscribing for The Herald or Union-Herald with you and thereby helping you to decide the winner of the Buick Sedan.

EDDIE STINSON AND HALDEMAN NEW AIR KINGS

Land With Plane at 1:20 P. M., Bettering Old Mark By 19 Minutes.

(Bulletin)

JACKSONVILLE BEACH, Fla., March 30.—(INS)—Setting a new world's record for sustained flight flying, Eddie Stinson and George Haldeman completed their endurance flight this afternoon at 1:20 p. m., by descending on Jacksonville Beach with their plane, breaking the old world record by 19 minutes.

The old world's record was 52 hours and 23 minutes set by Stinson and Haldeman have now established themselves as the new world champions by their feat.

JACKSONVILLE BEACH, Fla., March 30.—(INS)—Climbing leisurely at an altitude of about 2,000 feet, Eddie Stinson and George Haldeman completed the fifth hour of their attempt to break the world's endurance record at 9:37 a. m., today.

Strong westerly winds enabled them to cut their fuel consumption down to about one gallon an hour, and the taking advantage of air currents to conserve their gas supply. Clayton A. Lippert, Stinson's expert, predicted that Stinson and Haldeman will remain in air until the last drop of fuel is exhausted. They will break the old record of 52 hours and minutes at 12:09 Eastern standard time.

The entire beach for a distance of three miles has been roped off and is being patrolled for unauthorized landing. However, the steady drone of the motor indicated that all was well.

The fliers are breaking the notoriety of their long grind, keeping a written record of the flight.

An Oakland car driven by F. E. Kline, of Ironton, struck the Circleville firm's truck after the two Circleville men had loaded the victims of the first accident on the truck intending to take them to a doctor for medical attention. They were cut and bruised more severely following the second crash, and they were taken to the city hospital in Chillicothe.

The two Circleville men escaped unhurt. Names of the occupants of the first wreck were not learned.

Famous Seafood Town Razed By Fire; One Dead

POCOMOKE CITY, MD., March 30.—(UP)—Crisfield, Md., famous seafood town 27 miles from here, was partly destroyed by fire last night.

Early this morning flames that had swept through four or five blocks of the business district were still out of control, though firemen from Crisfield and nearby towns had fought them since 7:30 o'clock.

Flames starting at 7:30 o'clock last evening were not put under control until 2 a. m. today by firemen from Crisfield and nearby Maryland and Delaware towns. At dawn the chief telephone operator at Crisfield said two-thirds of the town's business district had burned, including two theatres, all large stores, wholesale establishments, and oyster packing houses.

At that hour she was unable to connect with a single telephone in Crisfield. She said she had heard that from one to three persons were injured, with possibly one person dead. The fire was still smoldering, she said.

SEIZE $150,000 BOOZE

NEW YORK, March 30.—(INS)—The captain and seven of the crew of the Schooner W. E. Litchfield were held today following seizure of a cargo of liquor valued in excess of $150,000, allegedly found on the vessel as she lay in the Hudson, off Yonkers.

NEW UTILITIES BUILDING HAS FINE OPENING

New Quarters of Light and Power Company Filled On Opening Day.

Circleville yesterday stamped its “O. K.” upon the new quarters of the Ohio Utilities Company at 114 East Main street.

Throughout Thursday afternoon and evening the formal opening took upon itself the nature of a community party, at which old friends renewed associations while enjoying the newest addition to the commercial improvement of the city.

The main office resembled a florist's display room. It was a bower of bloom, magnificent floral gifts from friends and well-wishers in and out of the city.

Every lady visitor received a rose, and the gentlemen were given cigars as the Company's symbol of appreciation.

Music was provided by a large Victrola which, with latest records, was sent down from Columbus by Heaton's Music Store, and a Radiola with loud speaker contributed by M. E. Noggle, of Circleville.

Fancy cookies, made by Miss Agnes M. Burke, famous Westinghouse home economist, and baked by her on an electric range, were particularly relished by the women and kiddies.

Perhaps no other recent event in Circleville attracted so many visitors from out of the city. There were present representatives of the Westinghouse, General Electric, Erner - Hopkins, Hughes - Peters, Sackett, Larkin and Graybar Electric Companies. Also, Division Managers of the Ohio Utilities Company from Delaware, Chillicothe, Gallipolis and Hillsboro. Officials from the central office of the Ohio Utilities Company, in Columbus, who came down for the opening were John B. Poston, General Manager; J. C. Martin, Vice President, and Lloyd Stout, Auditor.

Visitors poured into the office at the rate of more than one hundred an hour from the moment of opening at one o'clock, and by the closing hour, a total of more than fifteen hundred had given the new quarters their enthusiastic approval.

Manager, Charles T. Gilmore passed a busy day. At noon the Rotary Club interrupted its dinner to give him a noisy welcome and boisterous congratulations. Immediately upon return to his office he converted himself into a reception committee. And what a job it was! How they poured in! But “Gil” came through. “It's fine to have friends,” he said as he locked the office and called it a day. “Such people deserve the best service we can give them,” he added, “and, by kilowatt, they're going to get it!”

The office appointments are complete in every detail, every convenience that the public could command was installed, everything was ready for the crowd that entered the portals of the company's local office. The manager Charles T. Gilmore and the employees of the company from the janitor up were at their posts to help entertain, and all are to be congratulated on the success of the auspicious opening.

Many Flowers Sent

Those who presented the compliments and congratulations with flowers were, The Third National Bank, H. E. Betz and Son, The Sackett Electrical Company, Geo. W. Rodgers, The Hughes-Peters Electrical Corporation, Guy Morman, The Rotary Club, the Ohio Utilities Company of Delaware, The Gray Bar Company, O. S. Howard, Mason Brothers, The Erner-Hopkins Company, William Barry, The General Electrical Company, The Edison Lamp Works Company, I. H. Mitchell and A. W. Janowitz.

The condition of Miss Lide Coldron remains the same. She is lying in a state of coma at present and is not expected to recover. Her sister, Miss Vene Coldron, who was confined to her home Thursday by illness, is recovering rapidly.

Each day the Herald and Union-Herald's great salesmanship campaign has been an opportunity and each issue adds many thousands of votes to the standing of the live candidates who realize the opportunity offered them and are not slow to take advantage of the special vote offer given and the grand total of ballots bids fair to reach an immense figure when the final count is made on April 14.

The vote offer changed yesterday and every candidate will try his level best on the new proposition. They will work harder than ever to make a good showing and thereby show their friends and supporters their appreciation of the many loyal expressions shown. All candidates realize the time is getting short, the campaign is about over and right now not a single candidate can feel even reasonably sure of a prize. The vote offer is good this week and consequently the time to make your reserve vote is the next five days.

It is those candidates who do not let a single day go by without increasing their votes in the paper who are making advances toward the final victory. Keeping eternally at it will bring success and regular earnest steady workers are those who will secure the prizes.

EDDIE STINSON AND HALDEMAN NEW AIR KINGS

Land With Plane at 1:20 P. M., Bettering Old Mark By 19 Minutes.

(Bulletin)
JACKSONVILLE BEACH, Fla., March 30.—(INS)—Setting a new world's record for sustained flight flying, Eddie Stinson and George Haldeman completed their endurance flight this afternoon at 1:20 p. m., by descending on Jacksonville Beach with their plane, breaking the old world record by 19 minutes.

The old world's record mark was 52 hours and 23 minutes and Stinson and Haldeman have now established themselves as the new world champions by their feat.

JACKSONVILLE BEACH, Fla., March 30.—(INS)—Cruising leisurely at an altitude of about 2,000 feet, Eddie Stinson and George Haldeman completed the fiftieth hour of their attempt to break the world's endurance flight record at 9:37 a. m., today.

Strong westerly winds have enabled them to cut their fuel consumption down to about eight gallons an hour, and the fliers are taking advantage of air currents to conserve their gas supply.

Clayton A. Lupole, Wright motor expert, predicted that Stinson and Haldeman will remain in the air until the last drop of fuel has been exhausted. They will break the old record of 52 hours and 23 minutes at 12:09 Eastern Standard time.

The entire beach for a distance of three miles has been roped off and is being patrolled for an emergency landing. However, the steady drone of the motor indicated that all was well.

The fliers are breaking the monotony of their long grind by keeping a written record of the flight.

An Oakland car driven by F. E. Kline, of Ironton, struck the Circleville firm's truck loaded the victims of the first accident on the truck intending to take them to a doctor for medical attention. They were cut and bruised more severely following the second crash, and they were taken to the city hospital in Chillicothe.

The two Circleville men escaped unhurt. Names of the occupants of the first wreck were not learned.

EL PASO, TEX., March 30 (INS)—Held in the greatest secrecy, the inside story of the Teapot Dome to the story of F. Sinclair's interests, as told by Albert Bacon Fall, was being prepared today for transmission to Washington for the opening of Sinclair's trial, scheduled for April 4.

Neither Daniel Thaw Wright, Sinclair's attorney, who questioned Fall at his home here yesterday nor Atlee Pomerene, special government prosecutor who was sent to cross-examine the former secretary of the interior, would comment on the testimony Fall's deposition.

The contents of the document, by stated, would not be made public until it is presented in the

Fall Near Death

Fall, who is reported dying, was too weak after the ordeal to be seen by anyone outside the immediate members of his household.
The widely-heard "inside-story" of the oil leases was unfolded in the library of Fall's colonial-style home, which tops a mountain-side hill at the foot of Mount Franklin.

Fall sat propped up in a great arm chair just above his head lung a huge portrait of the late President Warren G. Harding. To the right of the huge colonial fireplace was a life sized portrait of the Senator Fall of long ago.

Attended by his personal physician Dr. H. T. Safford, Judge Fall, 65, Fall, and other members of the family received the party from Washington with typical southern courtesy. Almost every other person present was visibly more nervous than the former cabinet officer.

Few Preliminaries

Preliminaries were few. The Washington delegation made known their wants. Fall said he was ready. And there in the lofty library with only his physician and loyal wife beside him, Fall got what he says he has demanded in all prior proceedings: the opportunity unhampered by legal counsel, of telling his side of the story of leasing Uncle Sam's lands to oil developers.

A clue to Fall's probable testimony was his statement two days ago that he believed the Wyoming leases were granted as a measure of protection for the government, and in good faith, and that developments have borne him out in this. He asserted that the bond deal with Sinclair, which involved a third interest for the oil magnate in the three river stock ranch, was a legitimate business transaction, and not be regarded as of interest to the public.

Although great secrecy surrounded the taking of Fall's deposition, it was believed that Sinclair's attorney questioned Fall only on matters relevant to the Sinclair case. R. W. Ragland, of New York, one of the oil magnate's attorneys, said it was at first intended to have Mr. Fall cover the entire story of the lease deal up through and including the ranch deal. Pomerene cross-examined the former cabinet officer for the government.

Fascinating Foreigners or Plodding Americans—Which?

WOOLING AND WINNING AN ART BY ITSELF

Europeans Seem to Have the Edge On Their Yankee Brothers in the Nice Details of Courtship, But—

By WINIFRED BLACK

AMERICAN men have no time to be attracted to women. They're all bossed by some woman, either a wife, or a sweetheart or a mother, or a daughter. Women don't like men who are easily bossed.

That's what a visiting foreigner has to say about us and our men.

I wonder if there is any truth in it?

What do you call attractive, for instance?

Clothes? Grooming? Manners? Good looks? A dim wit? A pair of broad shoulders? Deep eyes? A certain way of speech? A sigh at the right moment? Flowers when you feel like flowers? A book of verse when you feel poetic? Oh, well, of course, the average American is not at all up in these things.

The average American falls in love with an average American girl and he doesn't tell her he'll die if she won't marry him. He doesn't try to persuade her to run away with him and live in a desert somewhere, without any bath tub. No, not even a shower bath, or a steam radiator for miles.

He steps around a little when he's a young fellow and he generally makes up his mind about the time he's twenty-six or twenty-seven that "capes" are all right in the pictures, but what he wants is a wife he can trust.

Somebody who'll keep down the bills, and keep up the table, and meet his friends, and help him plan things in business, and—forget it—give him children some day—let two soon.

The average American girl wants a man to buy her roses and candy, a nice diamond engagement ring and put down a first payment on the bungalow, or the community apartment, as the case may be. If he should write poetry to her, she wouldn't know what on earth to do with it.

Ten chances to one, she'd think he was "kidding" her.

But just the same, when that same girl meets a man who really knows how to make real moving picture love, just watch her step along with him—right to the end of the world.

The older and more experienced she is, the faster she'll stop. I've seen the older widow who had a "happy" marriage in a year say "No" to every one of them—a banker, a stock broker, a hatter, a United States Senator, a socialist, a theatrical manager, and several others. She looked right out of the picture when a good-looking fellow, who knew how to bow and flirt, was so solemn when he should have been gay, and never was gay when he should have been serious.

He hasn't got a head in his head. He never paid a debt in his life. He had a marvelous technique in borrowing money. He could make love to a woman in a way that would make a woman's heart beat. He could make love to a woman in a way that would make a woman's heart beat. He could make love to a woman in a way that would make a woman's heart beat.

The American talked to her about her mind and about herself and about business—the foreigner talked to her about her eyelashes and told her what

Love's Embers "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

The Princess Interrupts Her Tale in Order to See Aunt Anna.

"YOU must use that word 'Aunt Anna' in connection with me," said Princess Orla of Transylvania reproachfully. "Remember, I am ready and anxious to serve you in any way."

I dated back no more pointed comment than her allusion to the magnificent person who had paid her "a fortune" for delivering a message, that daughter, was sure that it lay the whole explanation of the sinister-looking woman which she so feared. But she volunteered no further explanation of her words, and I conjectured that only the most imminent danger would wrest that secret from her. A moment later I readily repeated speaking at all for instance of continuing the story of her escape from the royal Transylvanian party while its members were in the United States, she asked an anxious question abruptly: "How is Aunt May going to her?"

Would she ever finish her story to me? This was the query sharply present in my mind even as I told her what the nurse had said. Perhaps it was only my fancy, but it seemed to me that she had intangibly drawn back into that part of herself where a princess reigned. With an imperious gesture she flung the blanket back and rose from the bed.

"She is calling for me, my poor Anna," she said, as she went swiftly toward the door. "Don't you see? She is calling 'Lina.' That was always her name for me, always. Of course she never would do it if she were conscious, and Henry is protecting me, as he thinks, by saying there is no 'Lina.'"

I was close behind her and before she had reached the door of her old nurse's room, I put a compelling hand upon her arm.

"Remember the nurse and the 'Lina'?" I whispered. "You must not arouse their suspicions."

She stopped and turned a startled face to me.

"Thank you," she whispered back. "I'll be careful. But come with me."

Capes and Cape Effects Are Fashionable

The Cape Influence Is Felt Both in Wraps and Frocks for Spring Wear.

By Marie Marot

THE new flare for capes and cape effects is gaining such wide popularity that we find its influence on every side. Even the very smartest evening and afternoon gowns show the trend, one of the innovations featured being in the under-arm cape shown in the evening gown displayed here.

Combined with the feminine note suggested by the rippled cape effect we have the ultra smartness of points. The frock itself is of black crepe chiffon and while the fullness of the skirt is clearly apparent, the long, slender silhouette is not lost. Even the full, pointed under-arm cape falls softly into cascading lines that carry out the illusion of slowness so desirable to every woman.

The under-arm cape, which is really the distinctly new feature of the gown after the fashionable bertha mode, then tapers down the sides, into the long V in the back.

Being made of chiffon the gathers at the top of the full skirt press together tightly so that the actual joining of the skirt and bodice serves merely to accentuate the waistline rather than to suggest bouffancy or even undue fullness around the hips.

In the case shown here we find another interpretation of the cape laid in the wide lapels which are cut on the bias to achieve the ripple effect. These lapels gradually become wider so that, after they pass the shoulder line, they form a deep, rippled collar in the back that carries out the cape idea. While violet kasha was used for this particular model.

Why Not Trace the Source of Headache?

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IT is only a little while since I wrote something about headache. But if it will help a lot of folks to get rid of this annoying symptom, it is well worth while to refer to it again.

I never attempted this sort of a classification, but I wonder if it is not worth making. Let us divide headaches in three classes.

First, there are headaches which are the result of remote disease.

Second, there are headaches which may be called "reflex" headaches.

Third, there are headaches which come from actual disease of the brain.

Having made this division, I will suggest another.

First, the headache may be due to organic disease.

Second, it may be a symptom of some functional disturbance.

Nature was very far-seeing when the brain was planned. It is made of firm tissue, through which run many blood vessels.

Through these the cells of the brain are constantly bathed with rich blood.

The brain is wrapped in a delicate covering, called the PIA MATER. This is a thin membrane, supplied with blood vessels.

Over this is another covering, the DURA MATER. Its purpose is to guard the brain substance from injury and the admission of germs or other agents of disease.

But Nature wasn't satisfied. Her next step was to increase this wall, and protect the brain in the thick bones of the skull. Over them she stretched the scalp, and gave the brain further protection by the covering of hair.

You can see that almost the only way trouble can reach the brain is through the blood. Without hammer or bludgeon there can be no successful assault from without.

If the blood can be kept pure and the circulation be left undisturbed, there is little chance of reaching the brain. That is your job. You must so order your living that blood fluid and circulation are not disturbed.

How can the blood be changed in quality or charged with materials that are harmful?

Any disease, no matter where it is located in the body, where pus is formed, is capable of disturbing the nerve cells and tissues of the brain.

This is the general rule. You can apply it as well as I can. Abscessed teeth, pussy gums, infected tonsils, diseased nasal sinuses, ulcer of the stomach, infection of the kidneys, bladder or sexual organs, a running ear, an infected appendix—anywhere, formation and absorption anywhere.

Any one of these troubles may have headache as a symptom. But it comes too as an accompaniment of eye strain from the need of glasses. Reading or sewing, or any other use of the eyes for too long a time may end in a headache.

Women are likely to have it during the menstrual period. Sexual excesses will produce it. Anemia from any cause is a factor.

It is a common thing after eating too much food, or as a result of indigestion and intestinal fermentation. The "toxic" effects of food poisons may be no worse than severe headache.

Lastly, actual disease of the brain or its coverings may have intense headache as one of its effects. Fortunately, these cases are rare. I have said enough to set your mind at work on your problem. If you have headache, knowing these possible causes, what is the reason for yours?

The planetary configurations for this day favor the removal of a long-hampering or thwarting system of obstacles. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Those whose birthday it is may plan for a year of activity and expansion after a time of congestion and obstruction. While this breaking of crystallized conditions may be sudden and have some unpleasant angles in the end, growth, fulfilled ambitions, increased money are sure to follow. A child born on this day may have many opportunities for making its way through its own efforts as well as by the aid of those in power and elders. It should be diligent, patient and ambitious.

WAYS TO CLASSIFY ALL CRIMINAL TYPES

One Large Group of Offenders Set Down By Scientists as the "Mentally Sick," But Normal Delinquents Are Numerous.

By DR. LOUIS E. BISCH

SINCE crime continues to mount, and since it is becoming a distinct threat not only to our social well-being, but to our personal safety, the general interest in crime has naturally increased. We must not, however, lump all crime together. In order to understand crime we must classify it.

This helps to clarify the crime problem. Three main types of criminality—what has also been termed "moral deviation"—can be recognized.

The first is Primary Criminality. Next comes Secondary Criminality. Thirdly, we have so-called Pseudo-Criminality.

Under primary criminality we group all cases of adults or children in whom no mental deficiency of any kind can be demonstrated by mental tests or other forms of examination.

Among these primary cases are those who deliberately set out upon a career of crime just as any law-abiding citizen would set out deliberately to become a business man or an artist, etc.

In other words, in primary criminality crime exhibits itself in otherwise normal individuals.

In secondary criminality the offenders are delinquent or criminal because they are sick.

Some scientists hold that this group composes the majority of all cases of criminality.

The diseases that may—but do not necessarily—cause criminality are feeble-mindedness, insanity, the psychopathic condition, chronic alcoholism, drug addiction, etc.

That we cannot expect a feeble-minded person or an insane individual to distinguish between right and wrong goes without saying. This class belongs, not in jail, but in hospitals, that treat this sort of condition.

Pseudo-criminality is really not criminality at all.

It compromises individuals who lead straightforward, law-abiding lives but, sometimes by accident or overcome by a sudden uncontrollable impulse, they commit some misdeed.

Remorse follows quickly, their "conscience" hurts, and usually they give themselves up voluntarily, never committing another offense against society or morals the rest of their lives.

If offenses committed by the above named types of criminality are exceedingly numerous.

Nevertheless, they may, for purposes of simplicity, be divided into three main groups. These are:

First, sex offenses.

Secondly, offenses against persons.

Thirdly, offenses against property.

It would be well if every man and woman would acquaint himself with the facts and causes of crime.

What is needed at the present time is a wide-spread public opinion to combat this growing menace.

The problem of crime is yours as well as mine—it is everyone's.

Often we do not become interested in the problem until crime knocks at our own door and we are robbed or assaulted.

The menace of crime can and should be combated at every turn.

Laws are all right, but we can easily have too many laws.

Enforcement of law is also not as easy as it might seem, because the criminal has all the advantages on his side. He strikes when the opportunity is ripe and he is more or less likely to take the guardians of the law by surprise.

What we need is a wholesome and roused public opinion.

No social menace, no matter what it might be, can long withstand that which we will make this your stopping place.

Famous Composers

By COZETTE DOUGLASS

Karl Czerny.

THOSE of us who have had to practice hour on end until our fingers just ached have good reason to remember the name of Karl Czerny, for Czerny's exercises are still considered a fundamental part of one's musical education.

Karl Czerny was an Austrian pianist and composer. He was born at Vienna on February 21, 1791 and received his early training from his father, who was a piano teacher.

At the tender age of nine he gave his first concert and at fourteen he had embarked on his career as a teacher.

Czerny was an especial favorite of Beethoven, and also learned much from his association with Clementi and Hummel. Perhaps Czerny's greatest claim to distinction is that he was selected as the first to play Beethoven's celebrated Emperor Concerto in public.

In a city which teemed with musicians and teachers, Czerny was perhaps the most popular teacher of pianoforte of his time. Among his pupils may be numbered the great Liszt.

Unlike most other pianists and composers, Czerny seldom left his native city, Vienna, except on pleasure trips. His compositions are many and one marvels at the energy which he displayed along this line, when one considers the demands on his time.

Czerny's various books of exercises both for elementary and advanced pupils, have had wider circulation than any other works of his class. Not only Liszt but many other famous composers and pianists have been successful in their training, thanks to his skillful training.

However, Czerny took no pupils who did not develop special talent. Outside his teaching he devoted his time to self-improvement, composition and literary work associated with musical interest.

Czerny was a gentle and sensitive nature, and to a great extent, this prevented him from following a public career. He was unmarried, an only child and lived always with his parents in whose home he was accustomed to give concerts by his best pupils. Beethoven frequently attended these concerts, and was so impressed with the tranquility and domesticity of Czerny's home that he asked the privilege of living there. This plan was frustrated by the illness of Czerny's parents.

Karl Czerny died in Vienna on July 15, 1857 and left his fortune, which was considerable, to the Vienna Conservatory and various benevolent institutions.

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

Betty Meets Two Happy Travelers.

"O

h, oh, oh! exclaimed Betty as two pretty little olive-green birds settled down on the porch.

"My, what early comers you are," she whispered. "I'm certainly glad to welcome you, little travelers."

"Welcome us," chirped the gayest dressed birdling, welcoming us now Mama Kinglet, all you listen to that," and both birds laughed merrily.

"Why, my dear Betty, we haven't just arrived. We have been around here all winter long."

"You have been around here all winter?" cried Betty. "Well, where have I been that I haven't seen you?"

"I don't think I have ever seen you here before. What did I hear you call your wife, Mama Kinglet?"

"Yes, my dear," chirped the smallest of the birds. "I'm Mrs. Kinglet and this is my mate Daddy Golden-crowned Kinglet."

"You are playing around in the snow all winter long—sometimes with Squeaky and sometimes with Happy Giggles. That's why we didn't see you before. What did I hear you call your wife, Mama Kinglet?"

"Well, I'm glad you weren't afraid of me," she said, "and I hope you'll build out in my maple tree and stay here all Summer long right here in my yard."

"That's mighty sweet of you, Miss Betty," chirped Daddy Golden-crowned Kinglet. "But Springtime is our time for traveling. We were just ready to start when you spied us. You see, Mama, and I don't care much about warm weather so when it begins to get warm here we go into Canada. Up there, we build our nest in one of the great pine trees and settle down to raising a family."

"And a real for-sure family it is," chuckled Mrs. Golden-crowned Kinglet. "Now come birds don't like large families but Daddy Kinglet and I do. So when laying time comes I lay about two eggs. Up there, we build our nest in one of the great pine trees and settle down to raising a family."

"Indeed she can," piped up Daddy Kinglet who was very proud of his little wife. "Indeed she can take care of the eggs, and after they have hatched, I'll help her care for the children. I'll tell her it takes some work to keep food in their mouths. But it's worth all the trouble for they two certainly are. I wish you could see our family."

"I'd certainly love to," laughed Betty softly. "But if you are on your way to Canada, I'm afraid I won't get to see them until they come back next year. But I do hope when you come back, Mr. and Mrs. Golden-crowned Kinglet, that you will make this your stopping place."

A TIP TO ALL NATIONS

INTERNATIONAL relationships are queer things, when you stop to think about them. Nations rattle swords, threaten one another with wars, engage in rival armament races and all the while protest undying harmony.

But once in a while two nations do manage to get together on a basis of real friendship. And we'd like to call the attention of everybody abroad to the two leading nations of the North American continent—the United States and Canada.

The United States Department of Commerce has just made public the full story of the disastrous fire in the great Hollinger gold mine, at Timmins, Ont., on Feb. 10, when U. S. mine rescue workers crossed the border to co-operate with the Canadians in the business of saving lives.

Fire started in the mine of a Friday afternoon. The Ontario authorities wired Washington, asking if one of the Bureau of Mines rescue cars could be sent. The call was received late in the day; officials at Washington were not at all certain whether they could legally send their men to another country. However, they decided to act first, and ponder the legality later, and a mine rescue car at Jenners, Pa., 75 miles south of Pittsburgh, was ordered to the scene.

Jenners is an out-of-the-way place, and it was Saturday morning before the car got to Pittsburgh. Bureau of mine experts boarded it there, and through the co-operation of railway and customs officials of both nations, the car was rushed to Timmins in record time, reaching there Sunday morning.

Then, after a brief conference, mining experts of the United States and Canada donned masks and went down into the shaft—risking their lives together in the hope of saving the entombed miners.

As it happened, the entombed men were already beyond help. They apparently had died within an hour of the time the alarm was given. Yet the trip of the mine rescue car across the border was not in vain.

That trip, we may say, stands as an object lesson to diplomats and prime ministers everywhere—an object lesson in the way two neighboring powers can get along with each other. Instead of hatred, fear and suspicion, the United States and Canada have friendly co-operation. They work together to save lives.

There is nothing finer, or more hopeful, in the history of international relationships. On this side of the water we have found the way to international harmony and peace. No forts line our borders; when a disaster occurs in one nation, the other does what it can to help.

The leaders of Europe might well ponder the solution we have found. Friendliness brings security better than heavy armaments. The United States and Canada have proved it.

KATE ADAMS COMES BACK

THE ancient side-wheel steamer Kate Adams, whose name has been famous up and down the Mississippi river for years, is to go into regular service again this summer on the Ohio river, between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati.

There was a great deal of color and romance to the old river packet boats, and many people were sorry to see them fall before more efficient transportation methods. Let's hope that the Kate Adams can pay her way. We can stand a little more color in our economic system.

"THE JAZZ SINGER," starring Al Jolson, is a Warner Bros. pictureization of this novel. It is based upon the play by Samson Raphaelson.

SYNOPSIS

Because Jackie, son of Cantor Rabinowitz, prefers jazz to synagogue music, he leaves home. Ten years elapse. Through Mary Dale, a dancer, Jackie, now Jack Robin, becomes a musical comedy jazz singer. The Cantor, discovering his son's profession, disowns him. Jack's show opens the Eve of Yom Kippur. Dillings, the backer of the show, jealous of Mary's love for Jack, with draws his money, leaving Lee, the producer, dependent on Jack for success. Yudelsohn, the Cantor's friend, comes to tell Jack that his father is ill and asks him to sing in the synagogue that night. Jack refuses because of Mary's and Lee's belief in him.

"Mr. Yudelsohn—Mr. Yudelsohn, did you find Jackie? Is all right, no?" her voice rose in her eagerness and excitement.

"Yeh, I found Jackie," Yudelsohn answered sorrowfully, "but he says I should explain he can't come tonight."
"Oh, oh, oh, oh," Mrs. Rabinowitz moaned, sinking into a chair. "He can't come—Jackie can't come. Did you explain him his papa is sick?" She tried to gather her wits about her and understand this strange situation. For a brief moment she thought it possible that Jackie might not have understood.

"Sure, I explained him," Yudelsohn nodded, "but he says what he gets tonight in a show what costs two hundred thousand dollars, and his boss won't let him go."

"In the theater—and his papa is maybe dying yet!" Mrs. Rabinowitz shook her head mournfully, utterly incapable of absorbing this

"Am I a doctor or a riddle guesser you should ask me such questions, Mrs. Rubin?" he replied in English. "I am worrying now who sings 'Kol Nidre' when Yom Kippur begins."

He turned as he heard the bedroom door open and jumped up anxiously as the nurse appeared, a medicine bottle and spoon in her hand.

"The Cantor, is he better?" Yudelsohn spoke anxiously.

"I'm afraid not," the nurse shook her head. "There seems to be very little change. I'm waiting for the doctor now." Her starched skirts swished out into the kitchen, where she was quickly followed by Mrs. Rubin.

Yudelsohn returned to his chair, and rocked back and forth slowly. But once more he was interrupted. Clarence opened the door quietly and tiptoed into the room.

"Did you find Jackie?" he asked in a loud whisper. "Is he going to sing tonight?"

"Sure, I found him," Yudelsohn said apathetically. "But he ain't going to sing—he can't come. He sings by the theater tonight."

"Well, I'm having trouble with the choir. I think you'd better come, over and see about it," Clarence paced the room nervously.

"Loafers!" Yudelsohn ejaculated. "What's the matter now. The committee votes, don't they?"

"I know, but you promised that you'd bring Jackie down there, and the choir doesn't think he'll come. And if he doesn't they don't want to sing—they didn't like the idea in the first place and now they're all fighting among themselves."

"They don't want they should sing!" Yudelsohn rose quickly and pushed his hat down further on his head.

"Well, they say that if Jackie doesn't come Levy'll sing, and he doesn't know any of the Cantor's tunes, and even if he did his voice is not good enough, and that he'd be better off singing alone than spoiling the services with a choir."

"Hum! Yeh, they're right," Yudelsohn agreed. "What can I do? The members are paying a special assessment five dollars for the Day of Atonement singing. If Levy sings they'll want we should give them the money back."

"Well, have you talked to my cousin, Avram Lipski?" Clarence suggested. "He just came from Russia last week and he's living down here."

Yudelsohn's face brightened at the thought. "Why didn't you speak from this before?" Avram Lipski I know—at least a voice he's got. I should speak from him yet. Come on, Clarence, first we go by the synagogue and explain them low-lifers Levy shouldn't sing. Then we find our cousin."

He took the young man by the arm and hurried him off.

In the Cantor's room Mrs. Rabinowitz was busying herself about the bed, straightening the pillows and now and then smoothing the forehead of her husband.

The Cantor lay pale and emaciated in a semi-stupor. Once in a while he opened his eyes and glanced vacuously about the room, but he closed them again soon, as though the effort were too much for his feeble strength. After a while he opened his eyes, this time a little more brightly, and beckoned his wife to come closer to him. She sat down on the chair beside the bed and took his hand.

"Sara," he whispered weakly—so low that Mrs. Rabinowitz had to lean forward to catch his words. "It's Yom Kippur tonight, ain't it?"

"Yeh, yeh, Yosele," Mrs. Rabinowitz patted his hand soothingly. "I can't sing tonight, Sara," he looked up pathetically. "I can't sing tonight. For the first time in forty-five years I can't sing tonight in the synagogue."

"No, no, Yosele, you shouldn't think from such things. The doctor says you should just rest. And next Yom Kippur you should sing gooder as ever, Gott ut helfen," she soothed.

The Cantor shook his head feebly. "It makes for the first time in five generations a Rabinowitz does not sing on the Day of Atonement."

A tear stole down his withered cheek, and Mrs. Rabinowitz wiped it away softly. He lay quiet for a few minutes. Nothing disturbed the silence save the ticking of the clock.

The Cantor slowly moved his hand until it rested upon that of his wife. "Sara," he mumbled, "I been dreaming Jackie come back to sing 'Kol Nidre'. Oh, such a dream." He paused. "Maybe God would forgive him—if he comes tonight and sings."

The mention of Jackie's name made Mrs. Rabinowitz start nervously. Suddenly she had an idea. Suppose she, herself, should go to the theatre and try to bring Jackie back. She looked down at the Cantor to see whether he were going back to sleep.

In the Cantor's room Mrs. Rabinowitz was busy herself about the bed, straightening the pillows and now and then sniffing the forehead of her husband. The Cantor lay pale and emaciated in a semi-stupor. Once in a while he opened his eyes and glanced vacantly about the room, but he closed them again soon, as though the effort were too much for his feeble strength.

After a while he opened his eyes, this time a little more brightly, and beckoned his wife to come closer to him. She sat down on the chair beside the bed and took his hand.

"Sara," he whispered weakly—so low that Mrs. Rabinowitz had to lean forward to catch his words.

"It's Yom Kippur tonight, ain't it?"

"Yeh, Yeh, Yosele, Mrs. Rabinowitz patted his hand soothingly. "I can't sing tonight, Sara. I looked up pathetically. 'I can't sing tonight. For the first time in forty-five years I can't sing tonight in the synagogue.' He closed his eyes, exhausted by his exertion.

"Nu, nu, Yosele, you shouldn't think from such things. The doctor says you should just rest. And next Yom Kippur you should sing gooder as ever, Gott ut helfen," she soothed.

The Cantor shook his head feebly. "It makes for the first time in five generations a Rabinowitz does not sing on the Day of Atonement."

A tear stole down his withered cheek, and Mrs. Rabinowitz wiped it away softly. He lay quiet for a few minutes. Nothing disturbed the silence save the ticking of the clock.

The Cantor slowly moved his hand until it rested upon that of his wife. "Sara," he mumbled, "I been dreaming Jakie come back to sing 'Kol Nidre.' Oh, such a dream." He paused. "Maybe God would forgive him—if he comes to-night and sings."

The mention of Jakie's name made Mrs. Rabinowitz start nervously. Suddenly she had an idea. Suppose she, herself, should go to the theatre and try to bribe Jakie back. She looked down at the Cantor to see whether he were going back to sleep.

TUNNEY TO PUT HIMSELF O. K. WITH DEAR PUBLIC

HIRE "PUBLIC" MAN WHO'LL BE HIS EXPLAINER

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Service Sports Editor
NEW YORK, March 30—Realizing that something is wrong and being reasonably certain that it can't be himself, Brother Tunney has acquired a public relations man to present him in such a way that, hereafter, Brother Tunney and the populace will be just like that. This developed today when Mr. Steve Hannigan arrived in the north to announce that he had taken over the matter of presenting the real Tunney to those whose normal conversation begins with "hokey" and ends with "blah."

It is gathered, too, that Mr. Hannigan will act as official buffer around the camp of the champion at spectator. Buffing neatly and quickly done while you wait in Mr. Hannigan's motto, and he guarantees to make an oral punch in the nose feel exactly like a friendly handshake sounds or something.

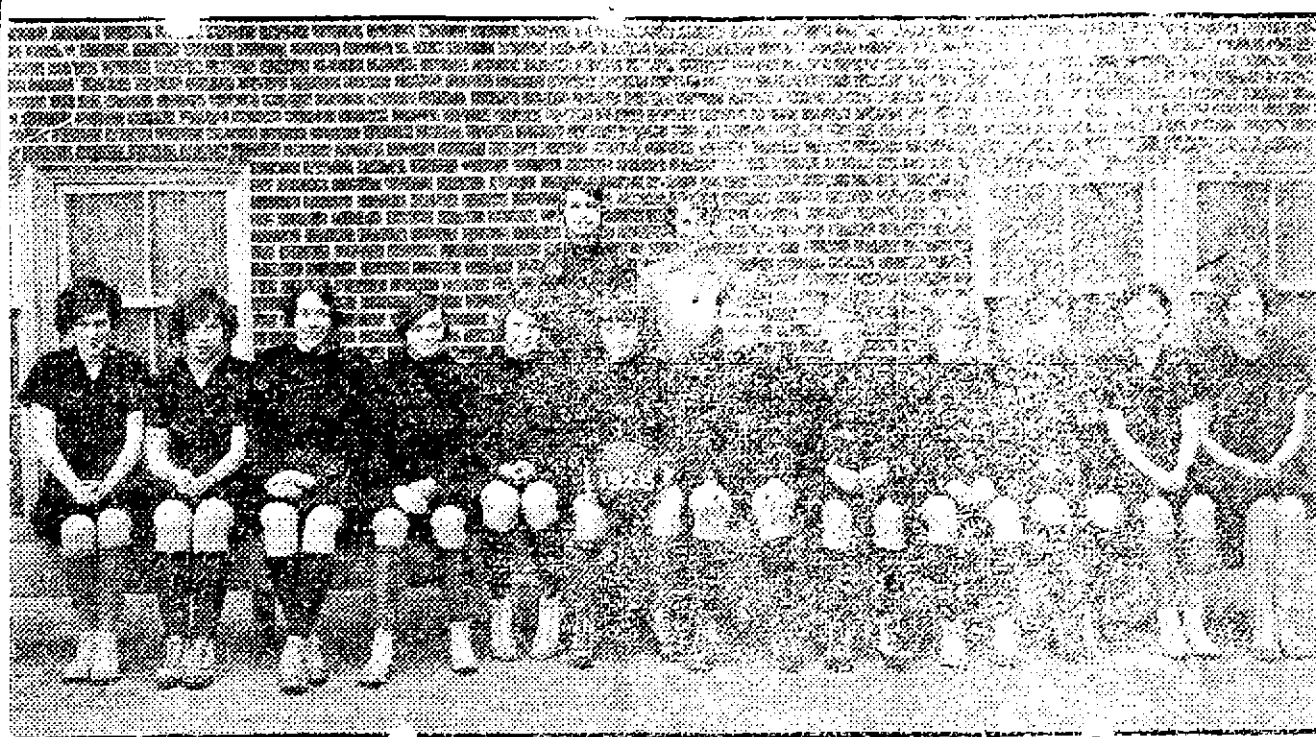

He'll Be Real Nice
In any case, there are to be no more misunderstandings between Brother Tunney and the public. In this connection, it might be mentioned that there have been plenty on both sides. It being something of a moot question which of the two has misunderstood the other the most. Brother Tunney, being still in a daze over the phenomena of overnight notoriety more than two years after it happened, hasn't been able to grasp the necessity of living up to the popular conception of his role. The populace, being equally at a loss to account for a champion who does exactly as he wishes, immediately took the only course that seemed open to it. It decided to resent him.

It is difficult to say just how much of this represents a hangover from fancied grievances of the past. Certainly, Brother Tunney is becoming fancied and less abhorred to the public taste as he goes along and with a little more help from the New York State Athletic commission, he may be running for president yet. The commission has decided to heckle him about accepting challenges from Joe Windmill, Luke McLuke or somebody and, before it gets through, it will have made a first class martyr of the man.

Wants To Fight

Anyhow, eulogies concerning his fetching personality have begun to adorn the public prints and he can't go behind the fact that, as a fighter, he is one of those twentieth century novelities who wants to fight. I should say, offhand, that one more victory in defense of the title will prove about all Brother Tunney needs to put

RUNNERS TREK TO LONE WATER HOLE ON ROUTE

Pyle's Caravan of Athletes Still Follow Detroit Doctor in Cross Country Race.

By LELAND C. LEWIS

I. N. S. Special Correspondent
MORIARTY, NEW MEXICO, March 30 — Thirty-five miles over rolling hummocks of sand dotted with pioneer efforts at dry farming, C. C. ("Cross Country") Pyle's caravan of callouses today bent their steps towards Palma, the lone water hole in their lap.

Arne Suominen, Detroit doctor, led the van through the seven springs — Moriarty Trek of 29.5 miles, covering the distance in four hours and sixteen minutes. His elapsed time for the 921.5 miles is 154:32:05.

As the days in the desert draw near an end, the ninety-four runners and walkers remaining in the grind continue to develop a spirit of determination that is not to be denied.

The steady progress of Voight Hofstater, Manistee, Mich., in retaining fifth place despite an infected sole brought on by a stone bruise, has been the outstanding physical feat of the past ten days. Surgeons in attendance have removed the infection and the plucky "flying dutchman" strikes a regular stride that holds his own with the leaders.

Olli Wanttinen, diminutive New York fan, now nineteenth in elapsed standings, continues to show improvement with each day, indicating success in his battle with "shin splints."

First Wright Plane Now In London Museum

LONDON, March 30 — (INS) — The Wright Brothers' biplane, which made the first flight of a power-driven airplane on Dec. 17, 1903, at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina is now on exhibition at the science museum here.

Orville Wright, who with his brother, the late Wilbur Wright, designed the plane, has lent it to the museum for five years.

The machine, which arrived here in crates and has been assembled by experts sent from America, is included in the aeronautical section of the museum, which includes models of all heavier-than-air machines.

Training Camp Briefs

By International News Service
ST. PETERSBURG, FLA., Mar. 30.—(INS)—The losing streak of the New York Yankees has been so prolonged that it is no longer funny to their owner or to the fans back in the big town. Their second consecutive defeat by the Buffalo Bisons yesterday, 3 to 2, gave them a record of nine defeats in ten starts.

The world's champions will pack their grips today and head west for a tour of the minor league belt.

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA., Mar. 30.—(INS)—The Brooklyn Robins are now getting better pitching than any other big league team. The Robins trimmed the Braves again at Miami yesterday, 2 to 1, Elliott and Ehrhardt allowing but five hits. Brooklyn also got but five bingles off Goldsmith and Robertson, the Boston pitchers, but the Robins safeties included a homer by Gink Hendrick and a triple by Butch Henline.

The third game of the series will be played here today.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., Mar. 30.—(INS)—Having left their camp at Augusta, the New York Giants will take on the local minor league team today. Pitchers Barnes, Crantwell and Fitzsimmons were left with the second team in the warmer climes around Atlanta, as all three are backward in their training and need sunshine and work.

Robins and Snow

The term "robin snow" is applied to a light snow in spring after the robins have reappeared.

With college swimmers from all parts of the United States participating, the annual National Collegiate swimming championships start today in the magnificent Hutchinson Pool of the University of Pennsylvania.

College swimming takes on new importance this year, in view of the Olympic Games. The events at Philadelphia today and tomorrow serve as a sort of unofficial test of America's national strength.

The Olympic tryouts for men swimmers will be held at Detroit, June 22 to 24, but many a college boy who splashes home with five points for his alma mater at Philadelphia will stand an excellent chance of making the American team.

Officials of the National Collegiate meet are permitting freshmen and other students otherwise ineligible to compete today, in order that everyone who might have a chance of going to Amsterdam can be seen in action. If there were an ordinary college meet, the freshmen, no matter how powerful swimmers they might be, would make up the cheering section. Scholastic and other eligibility rules also are lifted for the occasion. At Detroit in June, they will not ask a boy what his college marks were nor what classes he attended.

Among the crack college swimmers at Philadelphia is E. H. Harrison of Stanford University, regarded as the fastest sprint swimmer on the Pacific Coast. Harrison is the leader of a little squad of mermen from Palo Alto who hope to win the collegiate team championship in addition to individual honors.

Some of the other Stanford hopes are E. W. Cundall, breast stroke champion, E. H. Brunell, who is competing in the 220 and 440, I. O.

Driggs in the backstroke and Pete Desjardins, the diver, who holds the national championship.

Desjardins, although he is only a freshman at Stanford, is an Olympic veteran and a certain choice for this year's team. At Paris in 1924, Pete won second place from among the world's best divers.

Minnesota is represented by Captain Sam Hill and Max Moody, who have been thrashing their way to numerous victories in Western Conference competition this year.

Oregon has a lone representative in John Anderson, who is entered in the 50-yard sprint and the 150-yard backstroke event.

Michigan has her sprint champion, Bob Darnell, in the sprints today, while other leading mermen at Philadelphia are Hoar of Springfield, Kojac, a freshman from Rutgers, Garlon and Allen of the Army, Groh and Holbrook of Illinois and Joe Farley of Fordham, who has been beaten but once in 27 starts at 100 yards.

Since the last Olympic games at Paris, nearly all of the world's swimming records have changed hands a number of times, so rapidly, in fact, that it is practically impossible to keep track of the various claimants.

The official records, including those accepted in 1927, however, show that Johnny Weissmuller is champion at all distances from 100 to 220 yards and that from then on up to the mile the United States does not figure in the free style events.

HERE'S "DOPE" ON POTATOES; HOW TO PLANT

Pickaway County Farmers Can Find Valuable Suggestions From Story.

In preparing for potato plots, a number of economies may be secured through some of the following suggestions: 1st, because of the presence of common scab, Rhizoctonia, black leg and powdery scab, it is practical to treat seed potatoes with 4 ounces of corrosive sublimate to thirty gallons of water.

A 50 gallon barrel with a drain plug at the bottom placed on a low platform offers an easy way to treat potatoes. Potatoes may be poured into the barrel, the dipping solution then poured over the potatoes and left for an hour and a half. At that time the solution drained off, the potatoes removed and the process repeated until the treating is completed.

After the plot has been well manured with fresh manure, an application of 500 to 600 pounds of 3-8-6 in the planter should give satisfactory results. 800 pounds of 3-12-4, one-half of it broadcast in the last application ahead of seeding and one-half of it applied by the planter will give very economic returns.

Due to insect and fungi, it is impractical to expect satisfactory yields unless some method of spraying or dusting is planned for. Dusting requires less outlay of capital for equipment and has proven very satisfactory when properly administered as a means of checking disease and insect ravages.

For further information on dusting and spraying or fertilizing may be secured from your county agent.

THE ARTS OF PERSUASION

PEOPLE'S success in life depends a good deal on how persuasive they are. The persuasive person can sell goods, while the non-persuasive one can't. The persuasive people in politics get elected, while those who are not persuasive are apt to get left at the polls. And so on.

In the public speaking course of New York university, the professors have been studying into the principles that tend to make people persuasive. They try to show their students how they can make use of those principles. Here are a few of the rules they lay down:

Don't try to do all the talking yourself.

Don't interrupt your opponent. Avoid an argumentative position that is belligerently positive. In the first half of an argument inquire rather than attack, etc.

A good many people are never persuasive, because they make such extreme and violent statements that the people whom they are trying to convince are irritated and angered by what they say. No progress in the persuasive art is made in that way. People who have any line of argument to present have to learn to do full justice to the merits of the arguments of the people they are talking with.

People who can't talk on any subject without showing temper will never get anywhere. They create more irritation than they feel, and their judgment is regarded as too prejudiced to be weighty.

It is a fine art to be a good talker. The people who can state any case forcibly and clearly will always be influential in the world. They will succeed in work and business, and their opinions will count in public and community questions. Schools and colleges accomplish a lot for their students if they can train them to talk well.

THE SPRINGTIME

Ah, how wonderful is the advent of the spring—the great annual miracle of the blossoming of Aaron's rod, repeated on myriads of branches." So wrote the poet Longfellow.

Something seems to revive the heart in the spring time. Old folks to whom life looked drab and dreary, are cheered by the return of the sun and the birds, and they grow happy again. Young people are said to fall in love in the spring. Some mating instinct stirs their old habits and form new families.

Everywhere hope and anticipation prevails. People look forward to the good times of summer. They feel full of activity and arrange for gardens or spots in which their muscle will have a chance to display itself. It's a great old time of year, and people courageously start out on new enterprises. The world is full of confidence and anticipation, and in that mood we all of us here in Circleville can do more than we previously had thought.

GOVERNOR SMITH'S REPLY

It has been said that a soft answer turns away wrath. But sometimes a good, rip-roaring bul-low is very effective, too.

Consider Gov. A. Smith's answer to the charge that there was something funny about his appointment of Harry F. Sinclair to New York's racing commission. It was a scolding, blistering answer, the kind of answer that lets you know the man who wrote it was mad as hell through.

We suspect it will prove a lot more effective in silencing the insinuation than a dignified, delicate denial would have been.

Elephants are the largest animals on earth, and microbes are the smallest, and a couple of the latter, if properly located, can make an elephant trumpet so loud that it would sound worse than static on a stormy night.—Zenesville, O., Signal.

THE WORLD

I always thought the World a place wherein we're not supposed to race, Where man can spend his idle hours in looking for A thousand flowers, A thousand flowers With fragrance rare To scent the Factory-odored air, Time to walk The streets at night And watch the Artificial light Play dancing figures Everywhere— And time to cast Aside his care— But Life it seems Is not for this For Business shatters Most of bliss, The business Of a pot of gold Until a man Is far too old To know the charm That lies about Too old for anything But gout— He lives within His little Hive Forgetting Nature Is alive—

And what we mean to say Is, Don't fail to look Along the way When you go to Your task today, Don't miss a single, Throbbing thing That might induce Your heart to sing; The span of life Is far too short For man to miss a Little sport And if you live For toil alone Your life Will be One solid moan.

Socialists and Bourgeois factions fought a pitched battle in the streets of Vienna and that's news everywhere in America but in Chicago.

Two Ohio college boys killed themselves because they couldn't have a date with a certain girl and it seems to us we'd rather not have a girl like that.

We used to think, declares Bob Ryder, giving a feminine touch to his column, that a girl with dirty white gloves on was the worst thing possible but that was before we knew about nude stockings that had been rained and splashed on.

And that was another day you never expected to live to see, but did, eh, Bob?

Every girl we meet seems to have some ambition that isn't connected at all with the home.

What this country needs is an automobile that will learn to stay in its own garage.

APPRECIATE 'EM, MORE! I'm crazy about spring flowers. When spring comes 'round each year.

But I'd like to have some spring flowers When the winter's cold and drear.

We often wonder what would happen if every business in the world got as many knocks as the old home-town paper, and as often.

Prohibition doesn't seem to have accomplished much in the way of prohibiting "Sweet Adeline."

The world goes on pretty much the same with now and then a man changing the tables around and shooting his wife.

The children were playing a new game called "trial and murder." Little Johnnie the ringleader, was assigning the parts.

A $12,000,000 building program is under way in the archdiocese of Chicago, it was learned as Cardinal Mundelein prepared to depart for Rome and a conference with Pope Pius XI.

The Y. M. C. A. of Philadelphia will shortly begin the erection of a twenty-two story building at a cost of $2,500,000. It will enlarge the area of the present building and add fourteen stories to its present height. On completion it will be the largest Y. M. C. A. building in the world.

Miss Florence Rowland, a junior at Denison University, Granville, Ohio, has a church attendance record of not missing a Sunday school session for 18 years. The hall where she is rooming, was recently quarantined because of scarlet fever and a church service was conducted in the hall that her good record might be maintained.

There have been many kinds of churches with many peculiar styles of architecture built in various parts of the world, but one of the strangest is the Grunvig church at Copenhagen, of the Lutheran faith. It is a replica on a very large scale of a pipe organ—the instrument most closely identified with church music.

The ter-centennial of the birth of John Bunyan occurs this year—1928, in November. Public attention has been called to it in Great Britain, and articles are already appearing in different religious journals. The Baptist denomination, claiming him as one of its members, is preparing to celebrate the anniversary with proper recognition and elaborate ceremonies.

According to E. C. Cummings in the Greater Indianapolis Christian Church School Bulletin, only 25 per cent of church members attend church on Sunday morning; only 10 per cent of the church members are active workers in the church; only 25 per cent of our converts are saved for the church; only 10 per cent of our Sunday school pupils join the church; and only 1 per cent of the population hears a Protestant sermon weekly. A World Youth Peace Conference is scheduled to be held at Ferde, Holland, August 17-20, 1928. The purpose is to stimulate and coordinate the study of the basis of peace, to establish a world peace center, and to establish a world peace fund. The conference is being held at the invitation of the Dutch government, and is being held in the city of Ferde, which is a small town in the north of Holland.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

The Princess Resumes Her Confession to Madge.

As the girl who had called her self Eleanor Lincoln entered her own room again, she turned to me with an almost piteous expression.

"How much darker it is in here than in Anna's room!" she exclaimed. "Oh! I see! It is that window shade! I almost never have it down. Will you raise it please?" Before I had time either to obey or ignore the command, for such it undoubtedly was, the girl threw out impulsive hands to me.

"Please forgive me," she said. "I am off guard today. You see things are so different in my country. But I really did not mean to be rude. It is perfectly all right," I told her, a bit perturbed, for I could not help but see what she meant by things being "different" in her country. She meant that in the minds of her family there was a great gulf between members of a royal dynasty and Americans of whatever class. And she undoubtedly had been so brought up.

She flashed across the room with the evident intention of drawing the shade, but I spoke warningly before she had touched the cord.

"Don't touch that curtain until I have a chance to tell you something you ought to know."

She whirled toward me in amazement.

"What? What? Do you mean that?"

Her voice died away, her eyes stared into mine. I was sure that she guessed part at least of what I was going to tell her.

"While you were asleep, someone was perched in the branches of the big oak outside. I am sure that when it was dark, had field glasses and was looking into the room. I caught the reflection from them in an old conjunction with the mirror and the sunlight upon the wall. I—this was some mischief, was it not? I think it is as well to keep the shade down for a while."

JESUS THE SUFFERING MESSIAH

LESSON TEXT—Mark 8:27-38.

GOLDEN TEXT—Whoever will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Great Hero

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Heroism of Jesus

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Cost of Being Loyal to Christ

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Interprets His Messiahship

1. Peter's Confession of Christ (vv. 27-30).

Two questions of Jesus provoked this confession. 1. "Who do men say that I am?" (vv. 27, 28). This question referred to the opinions of the people regarding Jesus. Some believed Him to be John, the Baptist, some Elijah, and some, one of the prophets. They all recognized Him to be a teacher of prophecy with more than human authority and power. Jesus was not content with this acknowledgment. Had He been satisfied with this He would not have been molested in Jerusalem, for the Jews willingly acknowledged Him as much more than a human teacher.

2. "And I will keep that shade down the rest of the day at any rate. I—I believe I will lie down again. I—I am not so strong as I fancied."

That she had understood only too well the meaning of the hidden watcher in the big oak was as patent as was the terror which was gripping her. But when with any aid she was again in her bed, she was determined to reveal how frightened she was.

"When we went to Anna's room," she began hesitatingly, "I was telling you that I was going to have a chapter of naming my 'nose bobbed.' I echoed the little laugh which she gave at the old slang term for an increasingly popular operation."

"You spoke of it," I returned, "I am determined to do her reference to the 'fortune' paid her for delivering a message. 'But I think you were just about to go on board the steamer when you marked the chapter to be continued in our next.'"

"Nothing happened on the steamer," she returned quickly. "But I secretly had written to Anna and Henry, telling them to be in New York when I reached there, and to find some way of communicating with me without anybody else of our party knowing it. You can't imagine how happy I was when during the very first week of our stay, I received a note from Anna."

The joyous outlook of the victory which was to be accomplished through the shedding of His blood led Him forward (John 12:22).

IV. The Cost of Discipleship (Mark 8:34).

The law of the Christian life is suffering. To follow Christ means to turn one's back upon the world. To repudiate the world means to incur the hatred of the world; to be Christians therefore means to share Christ's suffering.

There must be denial of self (v. 34). There is a wide difference between self-denial and denial of self. All people practice self-denial, but only Christians deny self.

2. The cross must be taken up (v. 34). This means the suffering and shame which lie in the pathway of loyalty to God. To live the daily life means suffering (II Tim. 3:12).

3. Christ must be followed (v. 34).

This means to have the mind of Christ (Phil. 2:5) and to perform the service of Christ. The blessed issue of following Christ is a life of freedom from sin and death, and eternal life hereafter.

THE JAZZ SINGER

NOVELIZED BY ARLINE DE HAAS

SYNOPSIS
Because Jack, son of Cantor Rabinowitz, professes jazz to Synagogue music, he leaves home. Ten years elapse. Through Mary Dale, a dancer, Jackie, now Jack Robin, becomes a musical comedy jazz singer. The Cantor, discovering his son's profession, disowns him. Jack's show opens the Eve of Yom Kippur. Dillings, the back of the show, jealous of Mary's love for Jack, withdraws his money, leaving Lee, the producer, dependent on Jack for success. The Cantor is ill and Yudel-son, his friend, begs Jack to sing in the Synagogue that night. Jack refuses. While Mrs. Rabinowitz comforts the Cantor she decides to find Jack and explain matters herself.

"Yeh, yeh, Yosele," she murmured. She waited for a few moments. Then she tried withdrawing her hand stealthily from his grasp. He stirred uneasily, but dropped back into his accustomed lethargy immediately. Once more she began pulling her away, this time with greater success. She wasn't quite certain how she could explain her absence in case the Cantor should wake again, and as she was debating on the possibilities of leaving the house, the bedroom door opened and Dr. O'Shaughnessy entered followed by the nurse.

"Well, well, Mrs. Rabinowitz," the gray haired, hearty looking Irishman rubbed his hands professionally. "And how's the patient today?" He began opening his bag and taking out a stethoscope. He "Now, now, Mrs. Rabinowitz, you mustn't excite yourself," Dr. O'Shaughnessy laid a restraining hand on her arm. "The Cantor is not much better, I'm afraid. You'll have to keep him very quiet—don't allow anyone to see him. He must have absolute rest. I'm doing everything I can. If he sleeps—so much the better. Don't disturb him, whatever you do. I'll call in later this evening to see how he is. Good day." He picked up his hat and went out the door.

"Mr. Yudel-son," Mrs. Rabinowitz turned on the jeweler hysterically. "I got to go and find Jackie. I'm his mama. If I tell the Cantor Jackie snags tonight he gets all right. I got to go." Mrs. Rabinowitz searched frantically for her shawl.

"All right, all right," Yudel-son agreed, "but I go with you. I know where Jackie is. Maybe he'll come for his mama."

The nurse appeared in the doorway. "Mr. Rabinowitz is sleeping," she told them quietly. "You're very tired," she went over and patted Mrs. Rabinowitz kindly. "Why don't you go out for just a little walk. You need some fresh air."

"Sure, sure, Mrs. Rabinowitz," Yudel-son urged. "We go out for a little while."

Mrs. Rabinowitz threw her shawl over her head. "He is asleep," she murmured. "Sure, I go out. Now you take care for him," she smiled up at the nurse.

"The nurse, I'll take good care of him," the nurse promised.

Yudel-son and Mrs. Rabinowitz started uptown.

CHAPTER XVI

As the curtain came down for intermission Jack hurried to his dressing room to put on his make-up. He opened the door, glanced abstractly at himself in the mirror and set about mechanically preparing the necessary articles for his blackface role. He dropped off his coat of clothes, revealing another suit beneath it. He loosened his collar, turned his shirt in at the throat, rolled up his sleeves and sat down before his mirror. Like an automaton he worked, smoothing on the layers of grease paint. Now and again he caught himself staring, vague and unseeing, at himself in the glass. A knock came at the door.

"Come in," he called, scarcely turning in his chair to see who his visitor might be. The mirror revealed the reflection of a fluttering, filmy pink, ostrich-tipped costume. A burst of music sounded loud and then died away as Mary opened and closed the door.

"Hello Jack," Mary came over and stood like a bird poised for flight by the dressing table.

"Hello," Jack answered lethargically.

"Well!" Mary looked at the boy smiling. But no answering smile met her greeting.

"Well, what?" Jack propped his elbow on the table and leaned his head on his hand.

"Well, you haven't said anything about my costume. Isn't it lovely?" she piqued round gaily.

"Oh, yes—yes—it's awfully nice," Jack turned and dully surveyed the little dancing figure.

"Goodness gracious me!" she gasped. "But aren't you high-bat?"

"Oh, I'm sorry, Mary," Jack rose wearily and went to the wash basin to cleanse his hands of the paint, "but I've got to tell you things on my mind. I—I just can't think straight!"
